Kaluwewa model village

Two phases of the Kaluwewa model village renovation project have been completed by the Air Force to mark the 70th anniversary of the Sri Lanka Air Force (SLAF). The Kaluwewa village situated in Halmilla, Kebithigollewa, is home to more than 300 families comprising about 900 people. Under the first phase renovations, the village temple, a playground, main hall and washroom complex for the school were completed. In addition, thirteen houses were built. In the second phase, an office building for the school, a water tank for the village and twelve houses were built. The SLAF Vauvniya base is entrusted with coordinating of all matters relating to these development projects.

Raid in Kalpitiya

The Puttalam fisheries office carried out a raid in Kalpitiya and confiscated illegal fishing nets, which cause destruction to marine resources.

Around 150 of these illegal cage nets were found after the raid on Tuesday. The nets are valued at around five million rupees.

Puttalam fisheries office Deputy Director told that these nets are illegal because young fish also get caught in these nets, and this prevents the growth of certain fish species. He further said that these cage nets are rented out by a group of businessmen in the area, and fishermen lay them in the sea around Kalpitiya. Naval officials from the Kalpitiya Vijaya Navy camp assisted the fisheries officials in the raid.

Ring around the sun

News of a ring around the sun spread faster than light on Thursday. There was a large circle of light resembling a full rainbow around the sun against the backdrop of a clear sky.

It is said that the same conditions can cause "moon rings" often on full moon days but solar halos can be more colourful as the sun is brighter.

According to experts, this is not a rare phenomenon and is more common than a rainbow, but people generally missed it, not tending to look up into a sunny sky.

Although lunar halos or moon rings on a full moon day are gorgeous and people can watch them with bare eyes, people should be cautious if they want to observe a solar halo, the experts cautioned.

Maskless masses and vaccination of elders

On Friday, health officials from the Colombo Municipal Council visited houses to provide vaccines for elderly persons, and during their visits they found that some residents were completely ignoring health guidelines. In fact, health officials encountered maskless masses.

"We have our masks in our pockets," was the answer given by some when reminded of their masks.

The health officials went out of the way to look for elderly persons and provided them the vaccine even though some were capable of visiting the vaccination centres.

According to a researcher, the most (1) vulnerable users of social media are teenagers. "Most teenagers now lack a (2) proper social life; their lives are focused on exams. There is (3) hardly any communication in their relationships. These individuals are further (4) secluded as the new media interactions are one-on-one," said the researcher.

"The lack of (5) awareness about personal security on cyber platforms was the (6) cause for many new media-related problems," says the Information Security Engineer at Sri Lanka Computer Emergency Response Team. "Users should understand that they should be (7) cautious when sharing their personal information just like in normal day-to-day social exchanges where we do not share personal information with (8) strangers," he further says. Another study revealed that most of the participants publicly (9) displayed personal information. Also, a large percentage of users publicly listed their mobile number and email address because they were not very concerned about (10) safeguarding their privacy on Facebook.

(10 marks)For

- ① My name is Anu Karunaratne, and I was born in Sri Lanka to a Sinhalese father and Tamil mother. My father, Saman Karunaratne, was a prominent scientist in Sri Lanka, and my mother was Akila Selvadurai. Although she aspired to be a teacher when she was young, later she had developed an interest in science and ended up as a renowned scientist. Right now, I am 32 years old and pursuing a career in science.
- ② I am fortunate enough to work on a science project in the USA along with some amazing women scientists developing medicine for critical illnesses. From the design of the medicine to the clinical trial team, nearly two-thirds of the researchers working on this project are women.
- ③ I am happy because I continue my family tradition of science careers. As a child growing up in Sri Lanka, I was lucky to have many female role models to follow. I always wanted to be a doctor, and also loved problem-solving and understanding how things work. That is what led me to develop a career in clinical research. I had girl friends who were discouraged from studying science and mathematics at school as they were perceived to be masculine subjects while history and languages were considered to be feminine subjects. Growing up around women with independent careers, it never occurred to me that I could not be a doctor or a scientist because I was a girl.
- ④ The culture of our family was such that working women were always encouraged and appreciated. My husband is also very supportive. He understands when I have to work late. We are equal partners in the house in terms of sharing the childcare and housework. I believe that it is important your family supports you in what you do. I wouldn't have been able to succeed in my work without my family's support.
- ⑤ To me, family, friends, and relaxation are more important than my career. It can be difficult to combine a career with the 'relaxation' and be supported by employers to get this balance right. I believe that equal pay and flexible working patterns are crucial to better support working women.

Thankful in lockdown

We all knew 2020 would be unique,
The days turned into weeks, then months,
The government repeatedly gave warnings of social distancing,
And the world sat there listening.

Today, I am thankful for family,
But it is not just me, it is all of us internationally,
Another reason of gratitude is technology,
and all the scientists who studied biology.
And the people who right now work hardest of all,
Are the NHS who stand up tall.

This is for all the people who have lost their jobs in this pandemic,
And all those who are diabetic,
and those who work as paramedics,
This is for all the people suffering from COVID-19,
This is for those with bad hygiene,
This is to make you realize,
That we should be thankful for those who we miss the most in this time

(Isha Matharu)

- (4) The phrase "But it is not just me" suggests that the speaker is not the only one who
- has lost the job.
  - has bad hygiene.
  - is affected by the situation.
  - violates the health guidelines.
- (5) Which of the following is not true according to the poem?
- Biologists tried their best to find a solution to COVID-19.
  - The government warned people to follow health guidelines.
  - Some people have become unemployed due to the pandemic.
  - According to the speaker, 2020 would be another usual year.

According to a survey conducted a few years ago, the students' English language competency is found to be a significant predictor for them to become successful in a Sri Lankan university. The survey has also made several other important observations. First, there are no equally distributed infrastructure facilities to learn English for all students in Sri Lanka. As a result, students who are less competent in English face a number of obstacles when learning and performing at university examinations. Second, students' poor knowledge of English hinders their participation in group discussions, projects and academic presentations. Therefore, the study concludes that it is necessary to identify students who are less competent in English early during the undergraduate period and conduct a formal English training programme for such students for at least a few months prior to entering universities.

A survey has revealed that (1)..... in the English language is an important factor that determines the success of a university student.

According to the (2)..... of the survey, students with poor English language proficiency encounter various (3)..... during their examinations in the university. Also, poor command of the English language (4)..... students' active involvement in some academic activities. Accordingly, the study proposes to select students with poor English knowledge and (5)..... an English course to enhance their English language skills before they enter universities.

Question 05

Read the following text and answer the questions from (1) - (4).

The first sentence in paragraph ② has been left out.

(20 marks)

- ① Child labour is an increasing problem in Sri Lanka. New laws are introduced to protect under-aged children from potential exploitation. Therefore, an amendment to the labour law of 1956 is introduced to add twenty more occupations to the list of work considered dangerous to children. As a result, Sri Lanka regards fifty-one work areas as dangerous for children.
- ② ..... Those surveys reported important findings. The first finding is that many children were in paid and unpaid jobs, helping parents in cultivation and family businesses. Among them, most children work in paid jobs while a minority is in unpaid and dangerous forms of child labour. The second finding shows that these working children had attended school although they worked. Surprisingly, 80% of working children had attended school in 2008 compared with 39% in 2016. The other survey finding indicates a drop in schooling among working children, and it was due to the long wait for G.C.E. Ordinary Level examination results. During this time, children find jobs and lose interest in further studies.
- ③ In addition, the latest survey results reveal the impact of COVID-19 on children. According to them, the continuous lockdowns imposed in the last two years because of the COVID-19 pandemic have had a devastating impact on some families. As a result, parents of low-income families have turned to their children to earn their family income, pushing children to give up education. Also, the non-accessibility to online classes and lack of data coverage in many parts of rural Sri Lanka have frustrated children who then give up education.
- ④ However, specific legal practices have been imposed in Sri Lanka, and they have led to reducing child labour. There is a particular legal age a child can work according to the law. In January 2021, the legal age a child can work was increased from 14 years to 16 years. This extension has reduced the number of children working. In addition, mandatory education up to year 13 in schools has also contributed to the drop in the number of children working.
- ⑤ Ironically, the year 2021 has been declared as "Eradication of Child Labour" by the United Nations (UN). The UN is a forum of around 200 countries. It strives for a world where 'children work on their dreams and not in the fields.' In compliance with the UN resolution, Sri Lanka has set a national committee to identify and address issues related to child labour in the country.
